program developed by Adobe Systems and published byQ: Target control requires Windows server 32-bit components to install - but I'm running Windows Server 2008 64-bit I need to run a web application which relies on a 3rd party JavaScript library. Since the library is fairly new, I'm pretty sure it's designed for 64-bit Windows OS's. When I install the library, I get the following error message: The ASP.NET AJAX library could not be loaded. Loader: Failed to load component: jquery-ui-1.8.16.min.js [TargetControl requires Windows server 32-bit components to install.] I've tried installing 64-bit browsers and browser plugins for IE and Firefox on my Windows 2008 64-bit server. The error message still comes up. How do I fix this? A: Well, in an effort to be a "stupid dumb user," I tried installing a 32-bit .NET framework, which also includes the ASP.NET AJAX framework. Sure enough, the error message went away. I had already installed the framework some time ago, but just installed it again using the update.exe utility in the Framework folder. Thank you! Tuesday, May 7, 2014 Relief of Obstacles helps the over-weight Balancing career with a family is not an easy task. Women usually face a tug-of-war between personal and professional life. The situation becomes worse when a woman has to handle the tough assignment of raising children in the absence of the husband. In fact, the situation becomes even tougher for those who have not earned a steady stream of income. Though the hardship is greater for a woman, it also has its perks
